

Tyler Sarjeant

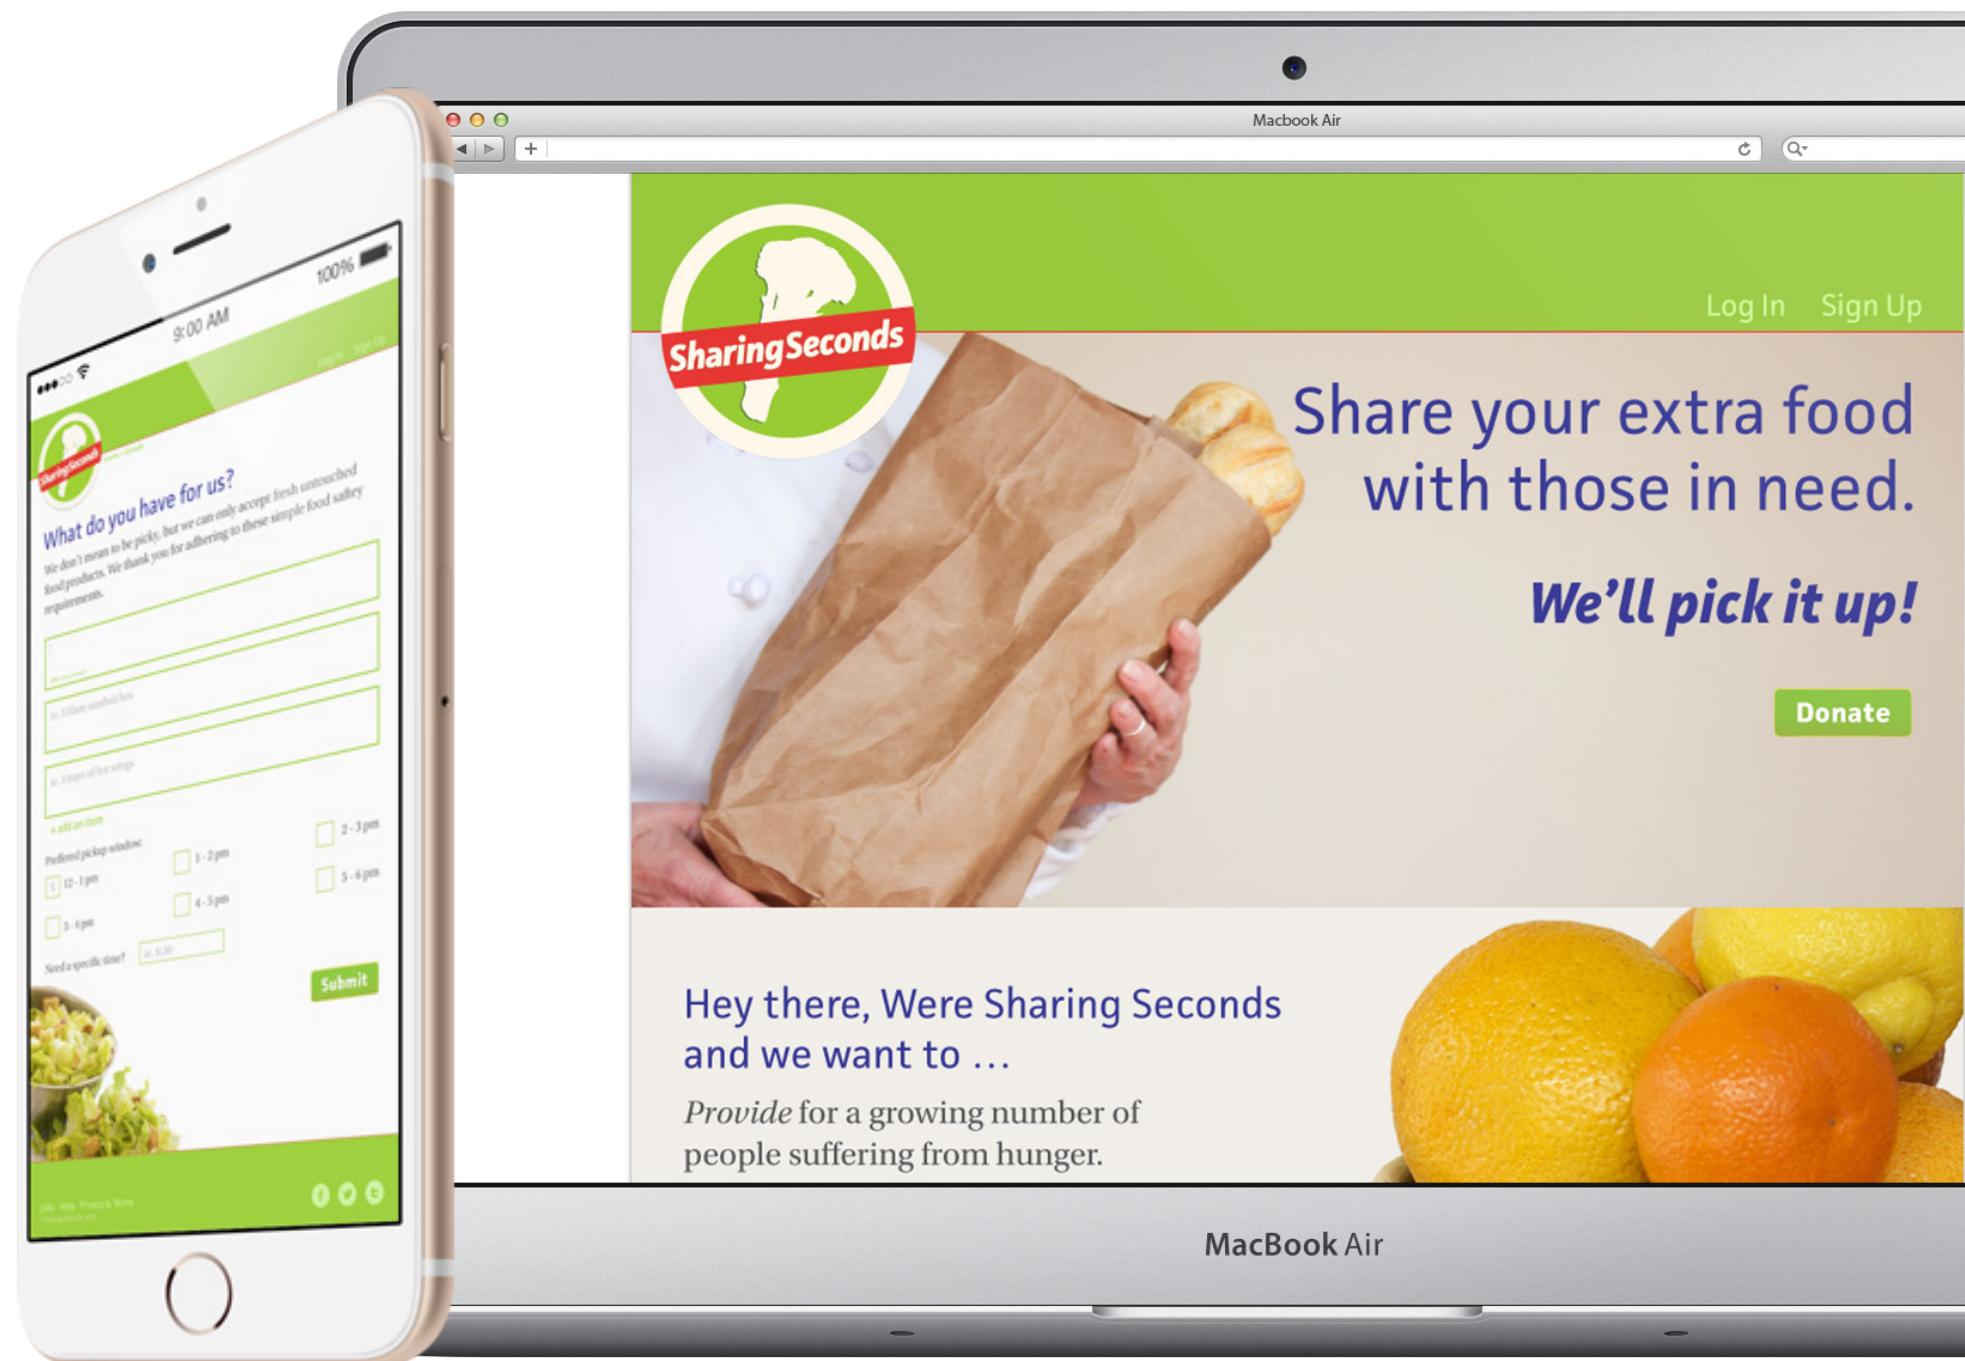

Design & Development

tylersarjeant.com

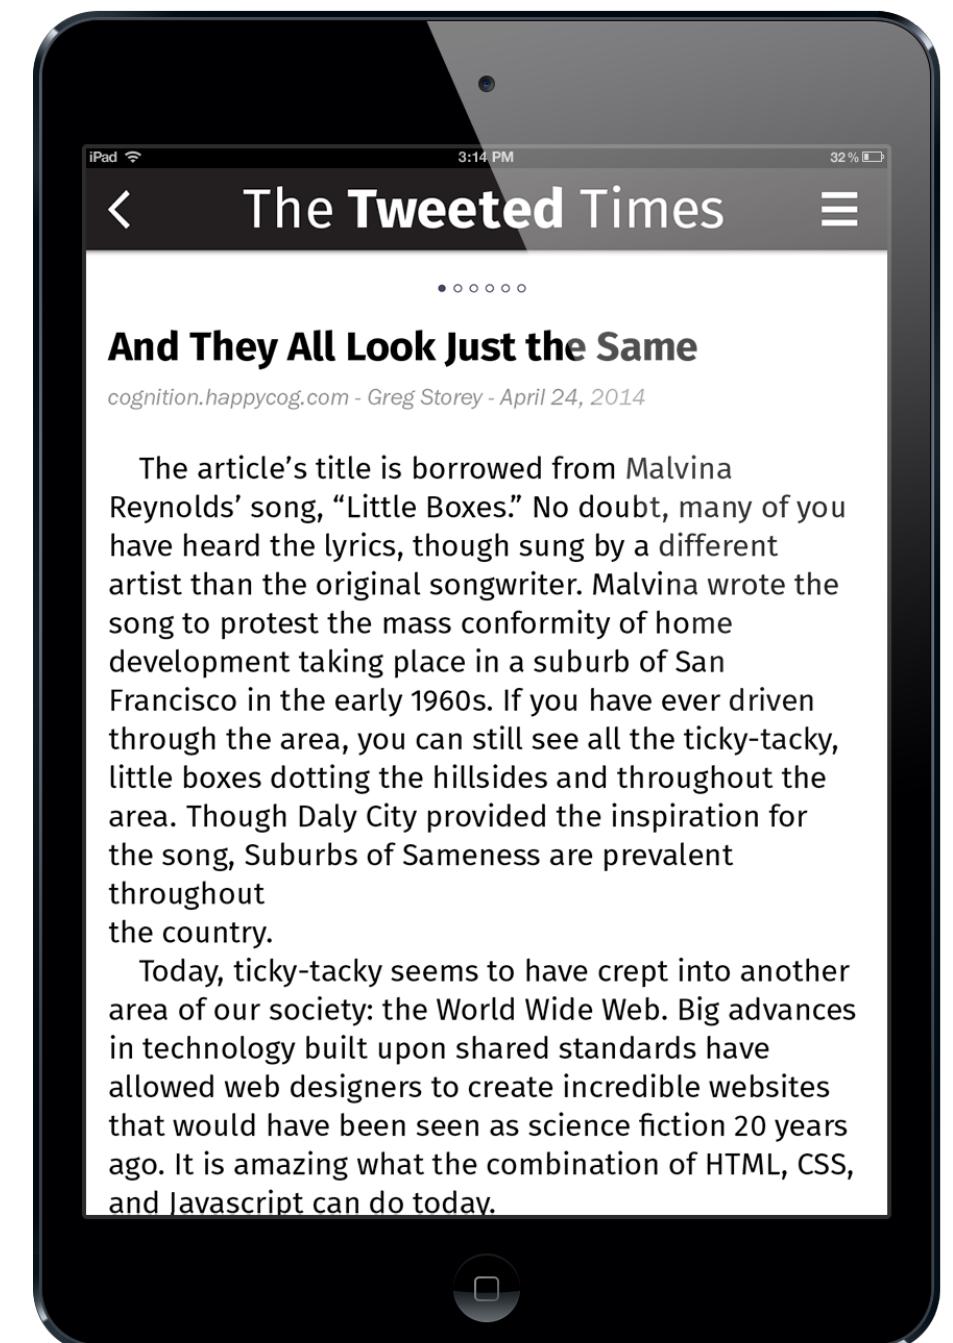

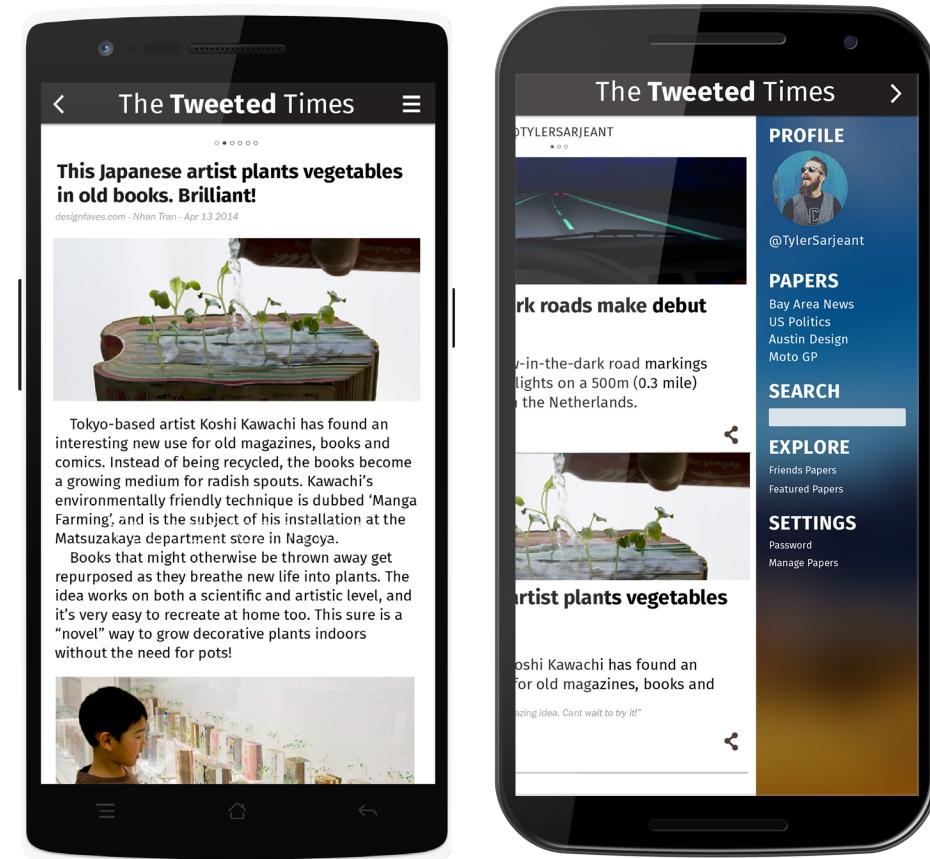

Sharing Seconds - Design & Concept

Sharing Seconds is a food donation platform making large portion leftover donation as simple as possible.

Tweeted Times - Concept & Interface Re-design

The Tweeted Times is a twitter fed news and information aggregator. It was based of an existing platform with the same name, however lacked the style, design, and platform availability an app of this manner shoud accomodate.

The article's title is borrowed from Malvina Reynolds' song, "Little Boxes." No doubt, many of you have heard the lyrics, though sung by a different artist than the original songwriter. Malvina wrote the song to protest the mass conformity of home development taking place in a suburb of San Francisco in the early 1960s. If you have ever driven through the area, you can still see all the ticky-tacky, little boxes dotting the hillsides and throughout the area. Though Daly City provided the inspiration for the song, Suburbs of Sameness are prevalent throughout the country.

Today, ticky-tacky seems to have crept into another area of our society: the World Wide Web. Big advances in technology built upon shared standards have allowed web designers to create incredible websites that would have been seen as science fiction 20 years ago. It is amazing what the combination of HTML, CSS, and Javascript can do today.

Tweeted Times - Concept & Interface Re-design

This animation depicts one possible user flow. It highlights some of the features of the platform and informs viewers of the possibilities the app provides.

Logo Design

Bicycle Film Festival - San Francisco 2013 Poster

I was contacted by the BFF director to create the 2013 San Francisco Bicycle Film Fest poster. The artwork, current branding, and general style was provided, and I pushed it to portray the requested feel.

TCB Courier - Handout Flyer

This printed flyer was produced to advertise a new venture TCB Courier was releasing. It was designed to grab attention and explain the service.

TCB Courier - Website Design (Wordpress Build)

tcbcourier.com

TCB Courier wanted to redesign its out of date website, and give viewers more insight to who they were as a company. It leaned heavily on a blog based home page supported by many additional pages covering their service and their riders.

The image shows a silver MacBook Air and a black iPhone side-by-side. The MacBook Air screen displays the TCB Courier website, which features a prominent 'We Ride for Your Sins!' header, a navigation menu with links to Home, About, Contact, Media, and Store, and a large banner for a job opening. The banner includes a photo of a cyclist, a list of 'NECESSARY TOOLS', and an email address for applications. To the right of the banner, there's a sidebar with a 'Tweets' feed from the @tcbcourier account and a 'Partner Companies' section featuring a logo for 'CUT CATS CHICAGO'. The iPhone screen shows the mobile version of the website, which has a similar layout but is optimized for a smaller screen.

DZR Shoes - Responsive Website Design

This campaign was developed to utilize as many javascript tricks possible. It is a fully responsive site, that adds some unique user expiriences to shopping for shoes.

CSS3 Tricks - Form Field Titles

This was a fun little test I ran to find a potential solution for those times when you click in a field and look away, only to return and forget what they were asking.

Just provide us with a little bit of information and we can get started.

Company Name

Company Contact

Email

Phone

Address

City

Zip Code Floor/Unit

Password

Confirm Password

Sign Up

Just provide us with a little bit of information and we can get started.

COMPANY NAME

Company Contact

Email

Phone

Address

City

Zip Code Floor/Unit

Password

Confirm Password

Sign Up